Cour Hundred Miners Killed by Exlosies in a Mine Near Glasgow. in Scotland - Twenty Dead Bodies Recovered-Great Excitement.

New York, October 22.—A Glasgow dis-patch says that the most intense excitement revails over the colliery explosion. Exploring parties are endeavoring to get at the miners, but there is little hope of recovering any. The bottom of the pit is said to be full of dead bodies.

LATER PARTICULARS. GLASGOW, October 22, 2 p.m.-The special train sent to bring the injured of the colliery explosion to the Glasgow infirmary has re-turned, no one having been got out alive. I'wenty dead bodies have been recovered. It is feared the entire four hundred in the coliery when the explosion occurred perished. The latest particulars from High Blantyre show that two hundred and thurty-three men ended into the mines this morning. Charge Imposed on Spanish Ships by the United States Indignant Protest from Spain-A Reconsideration Nought by the Madrid Government.

Madrid, October 19,-The news of the cential charge of fifty cents per on imposed by the United States in September upon Spanish vessels trading in American waters was received here a few days ago and was confirmed yesterday. Its publication in the Madrid papers has brought forth expres sions of deep resentment on all sides, more especially among the mercantile classes. ose interests are more or less affected by the change. All the papers devote editorials to the subject, and their criticisms are of the sharpest possible kind.

SURPRISE IN MADRID. The reason of the measure is unknown here, and no warning or explanation had been given either to the Spanish government or the Spanish minister at Washington, it has taken every one completely by surprise. The ations between the two governments were ver of a more friendly character, and the Madrid government are most anxious that this friendly spirit should be maintained.

ectal Correspondence of the Appeal.] WASHINGTON, October 18 .- The ho has adjourned until Saturday, and the senate in session is busy with the cases of Spofford and Eustis, of Louisiana, and Butler, of South Carolina. So far has the extra session progressed. Anticipations of warm debate progressed. Anticipations of warm debate and heated controversy have been disappointed. Quiet and decorum have prevailed in both houses, and peace is the order of the day. What the future may develop is something it may do speculate but not build upon. The result of the elections in Ohio has upset the calculations of shrewd Republicans and imparted to the Democrats a buoyancy inducing the most sanguine anticipations. Pennsylvania and New York are ours beyond doubt, and some Republicans even concede Massachusetts to us. Indeed, there is scarcely any limit to the success of the Democratic party. After twenty years of battle or the party in minority, it has reached Mount scarcely any limit to the success of the Democratic party. After twenty years of battle as the party in minority, it has reached Mount Pisgah and can see the promised land, and unless it is, as Grant said in a recent interview for the promised land, and the promised land, and the promised land, and the promise of the promised land, and the promise of the period of the subjects treated of in the president's message, while others who are not so eligibly located want to continue on so as to make the regular session a short one. Until the Democratic caucus meets it is impossible even to great while when the promise of the period of the subjects treated of in the president's message, while others who are not so eligibly located want to continue on so as to make the regular session a short one. Until the Democratic caucus meets it is impossible even to great the promise of the promise unless ft is, as Grant said in a recent interview, forever fated to fall a prey to mismanagement on the eve of victory, before two years pass away it will be the party of the majority throughout the Union. Blaine has been to see the President, and has doubtless made peace, and Conkling has set his face in the direction of the White House. A consolidation of all the elemements of Republicanism has been decided upon, and party lines will be rigidly drawn hereafter. Edmunds is a lawyer of unusual points of excellence, and Conkling is both lawyer and statesman; but neither could fill the shoes of the dying senator to whom the south owes the most vindictive of the repressive legislation of reconstruction days and the prolongation of those days in malignancy and bitterness of spirit. But of this perhaps he has repented. We have good grounds for believing that he has, in the indorsement he voluntarily gave the President solice. If his court is to be composed of the circuit judge and the district judges of each circuit; the full bench to consist of five judges, three being a quorum, its decisions to be final, except where the amount involved exceeds ten thousand dollars. It is to top or interferq with this trade is so clearly of his adoption of Democratic policy. If his health had been restored sufficiently to enable him to occupy his chair in the senate, it may be that he would, while securing harmony among his fellow-partisans, have made peace with the south, furled the bloody shirt, and sought a more enduring fame on a broad and liberal field, inducing oblivion on our part for his past, But, even in the absence of proofs of his loyalty to the nobler duties of states-manship, we can affect to forgive, if we cannot forget. His body covered with bed sores, his nervous system completely broken, and only a wreck of his former burdened self, Senator Morton is removed from political hostility, and is out of the reach of personal shafts. To strike at him now is like striking at the dead. A giant in his day, he leaves no one to fulfill, as he did, what his partyexpects in a bold, vigorous leader, full of resource, skilled in legislation, aggressive, determined, and relentless. It will take Conkling, Blaine and Edmunds to manage and direct as he did. Hence this patching up of of a peace, the high contracting parties to which will each make concessions. There is every disposition to treat him with a generous courtesy in recognition of what he has done, but there will be no alliance nor any surrender of principle or policy. The party lines are to be rigidly drawn in preparation for serious work. Looking to this, Mr. Randall will report perhaps on Monday) to the house the standing committees organized upon a basis of fitness and special adaptation to the work of atness and special adaptation to the work of each. Experience, integrity, and industry are qualities that will recommend men to him, especially for the chairmanships, of which it is likely three will fall to the lot of our State—Bright will fill his old place at the head of the claims committee; Atkinson will go to that of appropriations (the second committee in point of influence in the house), and Casey Young to that of public buildings and Casey Young to that of public buildings and grounds. Mr. Money, of Mississippi, may possibly be made chairman of the levee com-

Morton, who is reported to be "dead from his chin down," will never again, his friends think, take his seat in the senate. His days of public usefulness have passed away, and his place must be filled by the three senators named. No one man in the Republican ranks is deemed equal to the task of leadership. Not because nither Conkling, Morrill, Edmunds or Blaine are not his equals in intellectual attainments, scholarship or experience, but no one of them order to facilitate the business of the supreme court, which is now two years behind, with but little prospect of pulling up, Senator David Davis, than whom no gentleman is

It would distribute the whole business of the Federal judiciary so as to lighten its burdens. The cost of the proposed court would not exceed one hundred thousand dollars per annum, including the salaries of the clerks and keepers of records—an amount insignificant when the great public benefit and the relief it will afford to the supreme court is considered. Hatch rs. Coddington; error to the circuit court for the southern district of New York.

The question in this case was whether the president of the Minnesota and Pacific railway company was authorized by the company to sell or hypothecate the first mortgage bonds of the company for such sum or sums as he might think for its interest, and to borrow money on the company's behalf at such interest as he might think proper, and whether, therefore, his disposition of certain bonds to Coddington bound the company. The court said it would be difficult to see what words would have been more comprehensive for the grant of power claimed than there used, and affirmed the decision made below in his fayor. Justice Strong delivered the opinion.

A case from Indiana was decided by the supreme court to-day. It turned upon the question as to whether Thomas A. Headricks, as counsel in a case below, had been guilty of such irregularity in chancery practice as vitated the decree the court found. An ap-pearance by him in the first instance as counsel for the company, and subsequently for the trustee of the company—Louisville, New Albany and Chicago railway company—in the foreclosure suit, did not present any improper or questionable practice, and the decree was affirmed. Justice Field delivered the opinion. THE COMMITTEE ON CONTESTED SEATS IN

The senate committee on privileges and elections met to-day. Kellogg submitted a written statement claiming that the public documents on file with the committee show he was duly elected by a legal government (Louisiana), but that if the committee should decide to consider subsequent revolutionary events in Louisiana, he will be prepared to furnish testimony concerning them. In con-clusion he says he had supposed the range of nvestigation which the committee would be inclined at the present time to adopt, in re-gard to the matter of his title to the seat which he claims, would be such that the papers already before the committee, if taken in connection with the election laws of Louisiana, would supply all the evidence on his part requisite in the case. the events subsequent to the alleged election of Kellogg have been clearly manifested by the people of Louisiana; that the Kellogg government was not a legal government, and that the committee is bound to take judicial notice of the merging of the two rival legislatures into one, which is acquiesced in by all the people of the State, and hence must accept the people's decision as final and conclusive. He therefore opposed the taking of any more testimony.
